NEWARK, OHIO

PERHAPS no town in Ohio, and few in the United States of the size of Newark has so many advantages and is in such a prosperous condition as this city. During the past four or five years this city has pushed ahead in a way that has been beyond the expectations of the most optimistic of her citizens. Newark is situated in the central part of the State. It is on a direct line of the enormous traffic between the east and west. The city is within a radius of 100 to 125 miles of nearly every important city of the Central States, as Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, Toledo, Indianapolis and many others.

The climate has all the advantages that promote a general healthful locality. The elevation is sufficient to enable a fine drainage system and few places are as free from the malarial diseases as this city. One strong point in favor of the city and one that but few cities can boast of being its equal is the fine supply of pure drinking water.

There is no denying the fact that Newark has made marvelous strides in a commercial way during the past five years. But while the city has been pushing so nobly ahead in this line the citizens have not lost sight of the fact that the modern city of America must need have other advantages than those of a financial bearing. With this in view one is at once struck with the general appearances of the fine shady streets, the beautiful residences, the magnificent church structures and the smooth modern paved streets. In fact no city in Ohio can boast of being more up-to-date and modern in all its public improvements than Newark.

The city is supplied with a complete sanitary sewer system. The system has been laid only after the most painstaking and vigorous search and examination of every leading system in the country. It is complete in every detail and stands for the best sanitary health conditions possible for a city of 25,000 inhabitants. Statistics show the death rate and sickness in general to be lower in Newark than in nine out of ten of the surrounding cities, not only in this state but in any of the adjoining states. This fact in itself is worthy of serious thought for any contemplating a change of residence.

The educational advantages are in every way as progressive and stand in the same high favor as the city in general. The public schools like those of any city are under the immediate supervision of the school board. The training being done by the superintendent, the principals and a full corps of efficient teachers.

For a full account of the manufacturers, business and professional men we refer the reader to the following pages.

B. & O. R. R. Shops.

Standing foremost among the enterprises of Newark is the B. & O. Shop. Their plant covers about twenty-five acres and give employment to 850 men during the day and 100 nights. They do all the heavy repairing for the locomotives and light work for cars for Central Ohio. 1500 railroad men comprising engineers, firemen, brakemen, switchmen, conductors, etc. have homes in this city. G. A. Schmoll is superintendent of the motive power and G. J. DeVilbiss, master mechanic.

John Hiser,

NEWARK

NEWARK, OHIO 43055

was first established under the management of Messrs. Ray and Ashbaugh 18 years ago, then occupying only the south room of their present stand. Two years later the business was sold to A. E. French & Co. It was so conducted for two years. In 1890 the business was again sold to John Meckes. Then again to Keastrug & Meyer. These gentlemen had much greater experience and it soon became one of Newark's foremost stores. Dec. 14th, 1896, a disastrous fire swept them completely out of business and so badly damaged the building that it was impossible to reopen until the following Spring. It was then that this progressive firm opened up with a brand new stock. Selections were made from American and European manufacturers of their choicest productions. It was not long before that which a few months before had been fire and smoke was again a thriving prosperous business, ready to serve its friends and patrons. It was only a short time after the opening that Mr. Keastrug, junior member of the firm, died. It was then that Mr. Lindorf took charge of the business.

It then became known as Meyer Bros. & Co. It was then that this business resumed with new vigor and life. Mr. Lindorf having been connected previous to his coming here with Marshall, Field & Co., Chicago, also with C. W. & E. Portridge, both the foremost stores of Chicago. His connection with these stores gave him a much broader and greater experience than anyone that had heretofore conducted the business of the store. It soon became known as the live store of Newark. It was in 1897 that the business grew to such an extent that it was necessary to look for more room. The following spring Mr. Lindorf secured the north room which gave him the largest floor space of any store in Newark. Only a year elapsed when Mr. Lindorf secured the 2nd floor where he opened up one of the prettiest and most complete Carpet and Curtain departments in Central Ohio. It was only a few years later when this thriving business again got beyond where it could be handled with care. In 1901 Mr. Lindorf secured another room in the new post office building which adjoins the double room on the south side. This he fitted up as a Cloak and Suit room, and without a doubt is as pretty and up-to-date a suit room as you will find in any city of our size. There is no doubt that Mr. Lindorf believes in expansion and the motto (watch us grow).

A little more than a year ago the firm became known as Meyer & Lindorf. It seems as if more life and new vigor had entered this progressive store as Mr. Lindorf states that their business is growing every day. 5 years ago they had 10 employes. To-day Mr. Lindorf states they have 47 and the largest exclusive Dry Goods House in Newark.

and experienced sales people. The floor space embraces 28,800 square ft. There are four fronts each including three floors and basement thus being equivalent to 12 stores and 4 basements. On the first floor is found everything kept by a strictly up-to-date dry goods house such as dress goods, silks, satins, notions and the well known art department. The second floor contains cloaks, suits, furs, carpets, draperies and the wall paper department. Going to the third floor is found a beautiful display of furniture and the latest ideas of house furnishings. It has been impossible to itemize everything carried by such a large concern as this but in the basement is found everything needed to couple the twenty eight fully equipped departments as queensware, china, lamps, stoves, ranges, hardware, etc.
